INVITATION AND THE LEADERSHIP OPPORTUNITY

The Maryland Independent College and University Association (MICUA) invites nominations, expressions of interest, and applications for a successor for its highly successful long-time leader, Tina Bjarekull, who will retire in 2019. MICUA is a member-driven, nonprofit organization, which has as its mission the collective representation of 15 private, nonprofit colleges and universities located in Maryland. Together these institutions enroll more than 64,000 students through 1,500 approved academic programs at more than 180 geographic locations throughout the State of Maryland. Each year, Maryland's independent colleges and universities attract almost $2.5 billion in research grants, which fuel discoveries, innovations and economic activities. MICUA provides exceptional value for the taxpayers of the State as its member institutions receive 3% of state funding for higher education and and grant 27% of all degrees conferred by Maryland's four-year institutions.

MICUA provides public policy leadership on behalf of its members, fosters cooperative efforts among its member institutions and the broader higher education community, and serves as the official liaison between Maryland's independent institutions and State and federal policymakers. In addition, MICUA serves as the Resident Agent of the Independent College Fund of Maryland (I-Fund), which has as its mission raising funds to provide scholarships and grants to students attending twelve I-Fund member institutions. More information about MICUA, its member schools, and the Independent College Fund of Maryland is available at: <http://www.micua.org/publications-reports>.

While there is an extraordinary history of support for higher education in Maryland, this is a time of great change for higher education in Maryland and in the nation. The State of Maryland has recently experienced significant change in legislative leadership as well. The next president of MICUA will be an experienced and savvy leader who can navigate the nuances of Maryland politics and preserve the unique State fiscal policies that support Maryland's independent colleges and universities and the students they serve. The president will provide strategic leadership in matters of policy, research, and legislation and lead a committed and accomplished association in the ongoing work of advancing Maryland's independent colleges and universities.

HISTORY/OVERVIEW OF THE ORGANIZATION

MICUA was founded in 1971 by independent college and university presidents to raise the collective visibility of their institutions and to work jointly in meeting the academic and financial challenges they faced. The presidents created MICUA to serve as a unified voice for the independent institutions and to help advocate their cause to the State and the nation.

About that time, the Governor appointed a committee, chaired by Philip Pear, a member of the Maryland Council for Higher Education, to evaluate private higher education in Maryland. At the conclusion of its work, the Pear Committee recommended that the State provide modest public support for private higher education to preserve and strengthen a dual system of higher education.

As a result, in 1973, a State grant program, known as the Joseph A. Sellinger State Aid Program, was established to provide State grants to independent institutions. The program awards State aid to independent colleges through a formula linked to their enrollment and to the per-student appropriation of selected four-year public institutions. Although not consistently fully funded since its establishment, this self-adjusting formula remains in effect today and continues to be a national model. In addition, MICUA members have been able to successfully participate in the State's Capital Grant program, annually securing significant funds to invest in campus academic infrastructure.

Today, a diverse and distinctive group of 15 institutions constitutes MICUA's membership. These public-purpose institutions offer students a broad spectrum of educational opportunities. Some common features stand out. From the smallest to the largest, Maryland's independent colleges and universities offer an education characterized by small classes and by close interaction between skilled faculty and motivated students. Every MICUA institution offers quality undergraduate education to a diverse student body, and increasingly institutions are expanding programs of graduate and continuing study to meet ongoing needs for lifelong learning. They are incorporating emerging technologies into their educational offerings in ways that reflect the societal and workplace demands of the information age. Maryland's independent colleges and universities are collectively one of Maryland's most diverse and valuable resources. As their advocate, MICUA is also an advocate for Maryland's future.

MISSION AND GOALS

The Maryland Independent College and University Association (MICUA) is a member-driven organization devoted to serving the interests of independent higher education and supporting the work of campus leaders throughout the State.
